A MCMXCVII

"Oh, my!" cried Snow White. "We don't have any apples. And I was planning to make a delicious apple pie for dessert!"

Doc rubbed his belly. "Pie?" he said. "Leave it to us—we'll pick you all the apples you want."

"Why, thank you," Snow White said. "I'll need ten apples for the pie."

Happy was the first to return. "Here you go!" he said with a giggle. "One apple!"

"Wonderful, Happy," Snow White said. "I'll see that you get the very first slice of pie."

The next apple came from Sneezy. "Ah-choo!" he said with a sneeze. "I picked it myself. But I think it's—ah-ah-ahchoo!—making me sneeze."

"Thank you," said Snow White. "Now I have two apples for the pie."

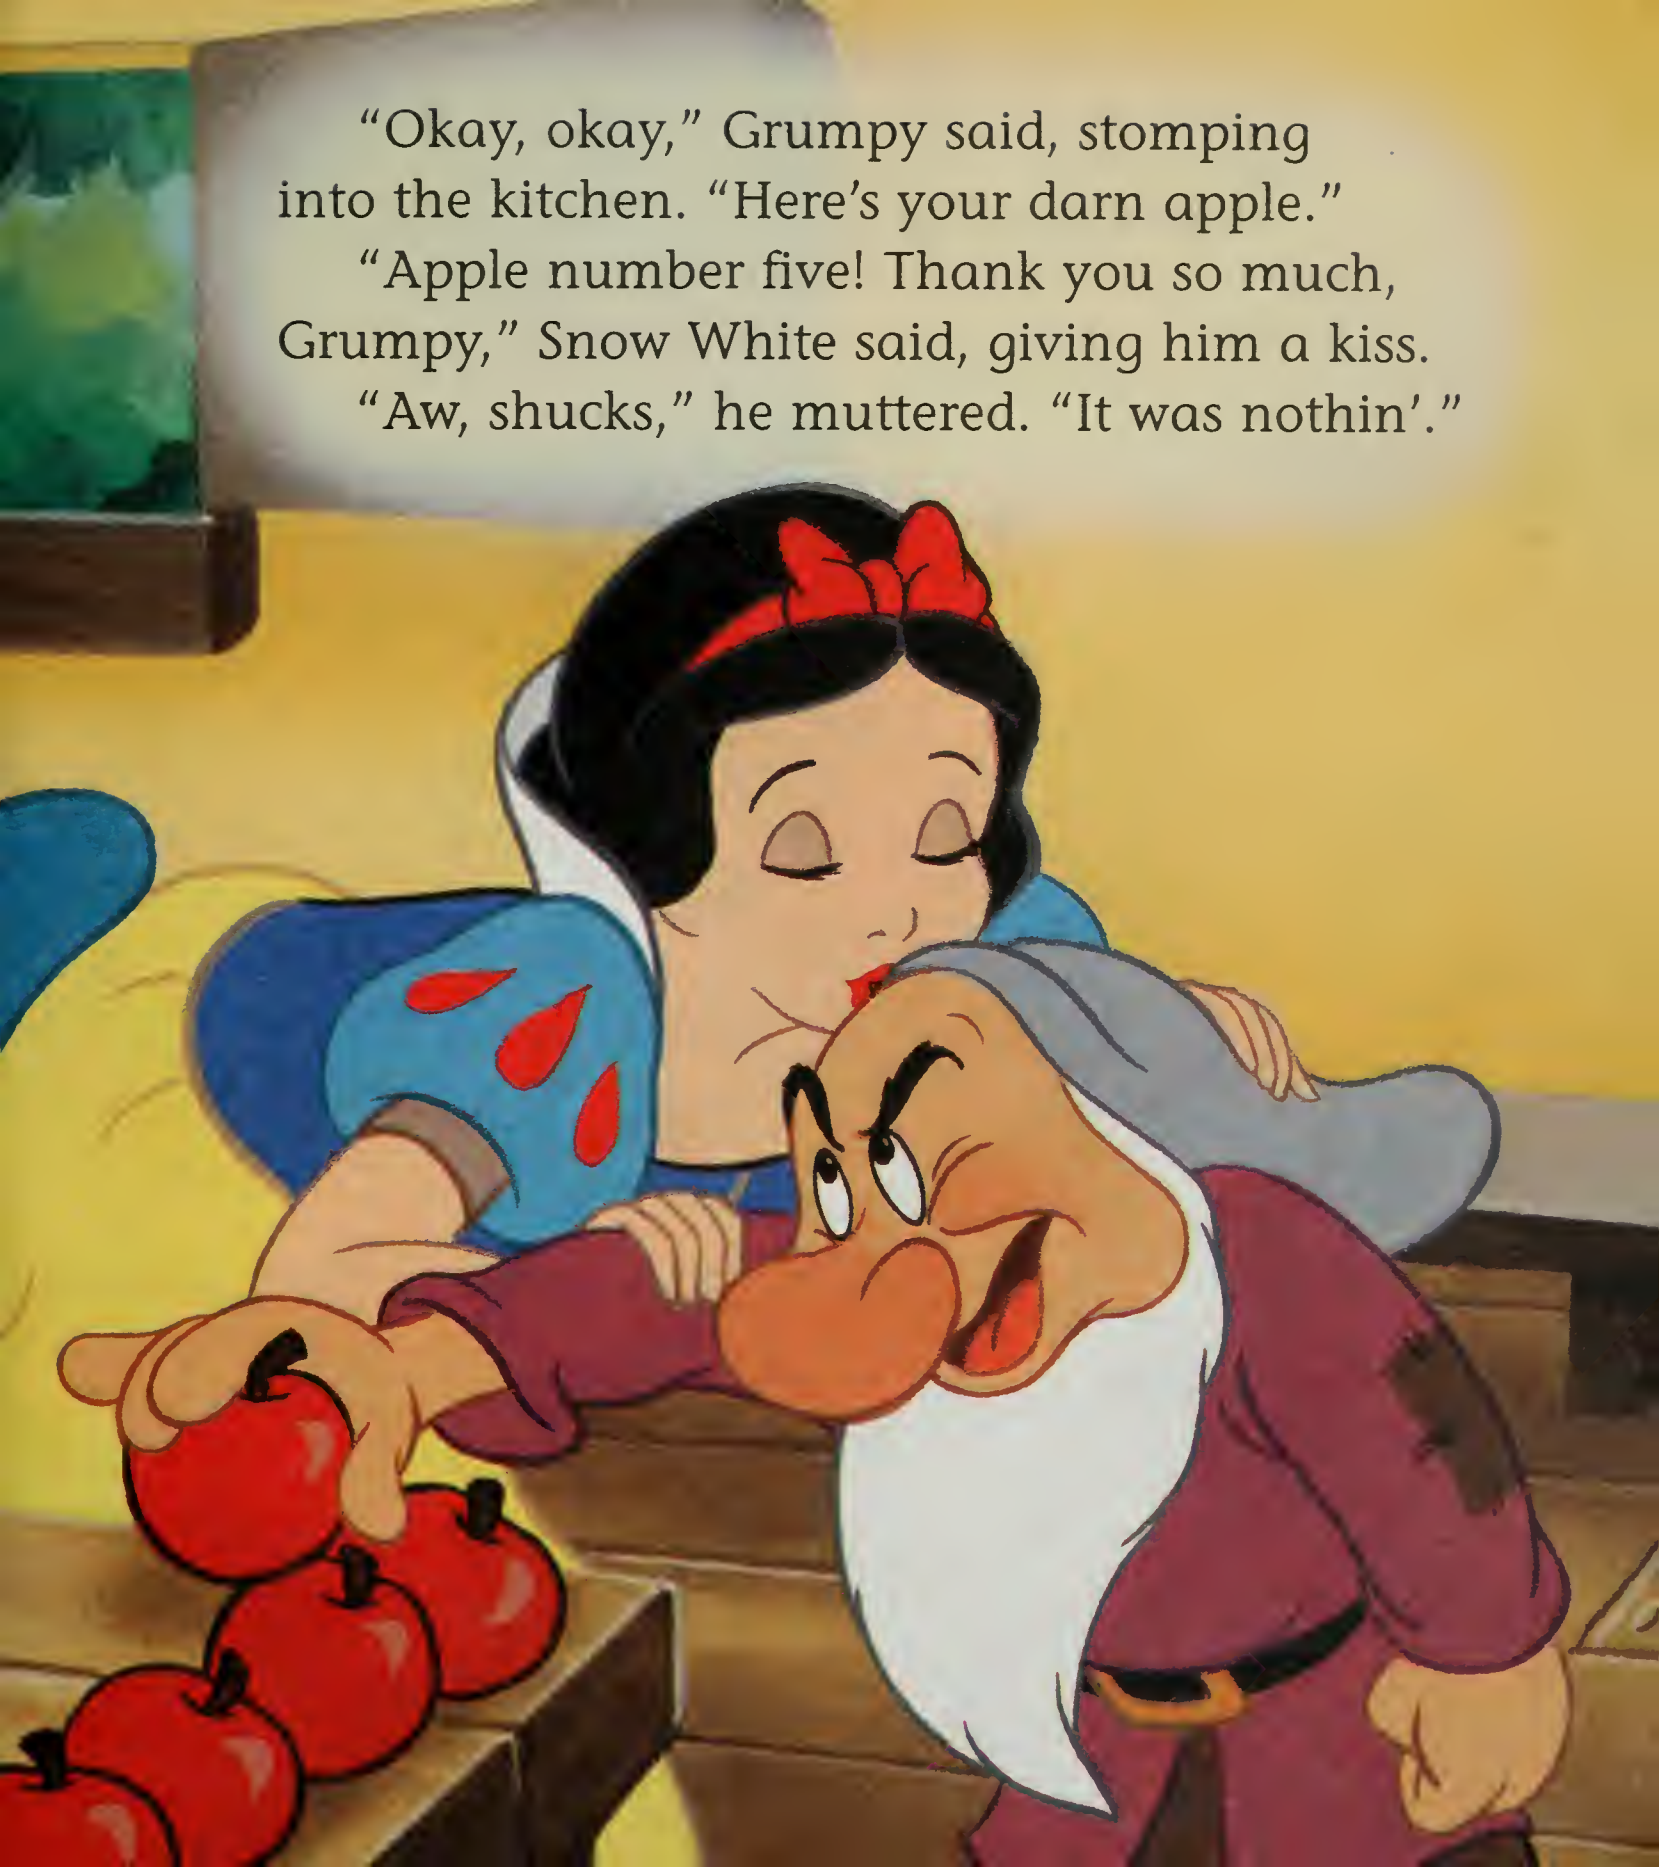
Apple number three came from Doc. "Here's a pie for the apple," he said. "Er, I mean, an apple for the pie."

Snow White smiled. "You can put it on the counter with the others, Doc," she said.

It took Snow White a moment to notice that Bashful had returned. "Oh, hello," she said. "Did you bring an apple for the pie?"

Bashful nodded shyly. "Here it is."

"That makes four," Doc said, counting the apples carefully.

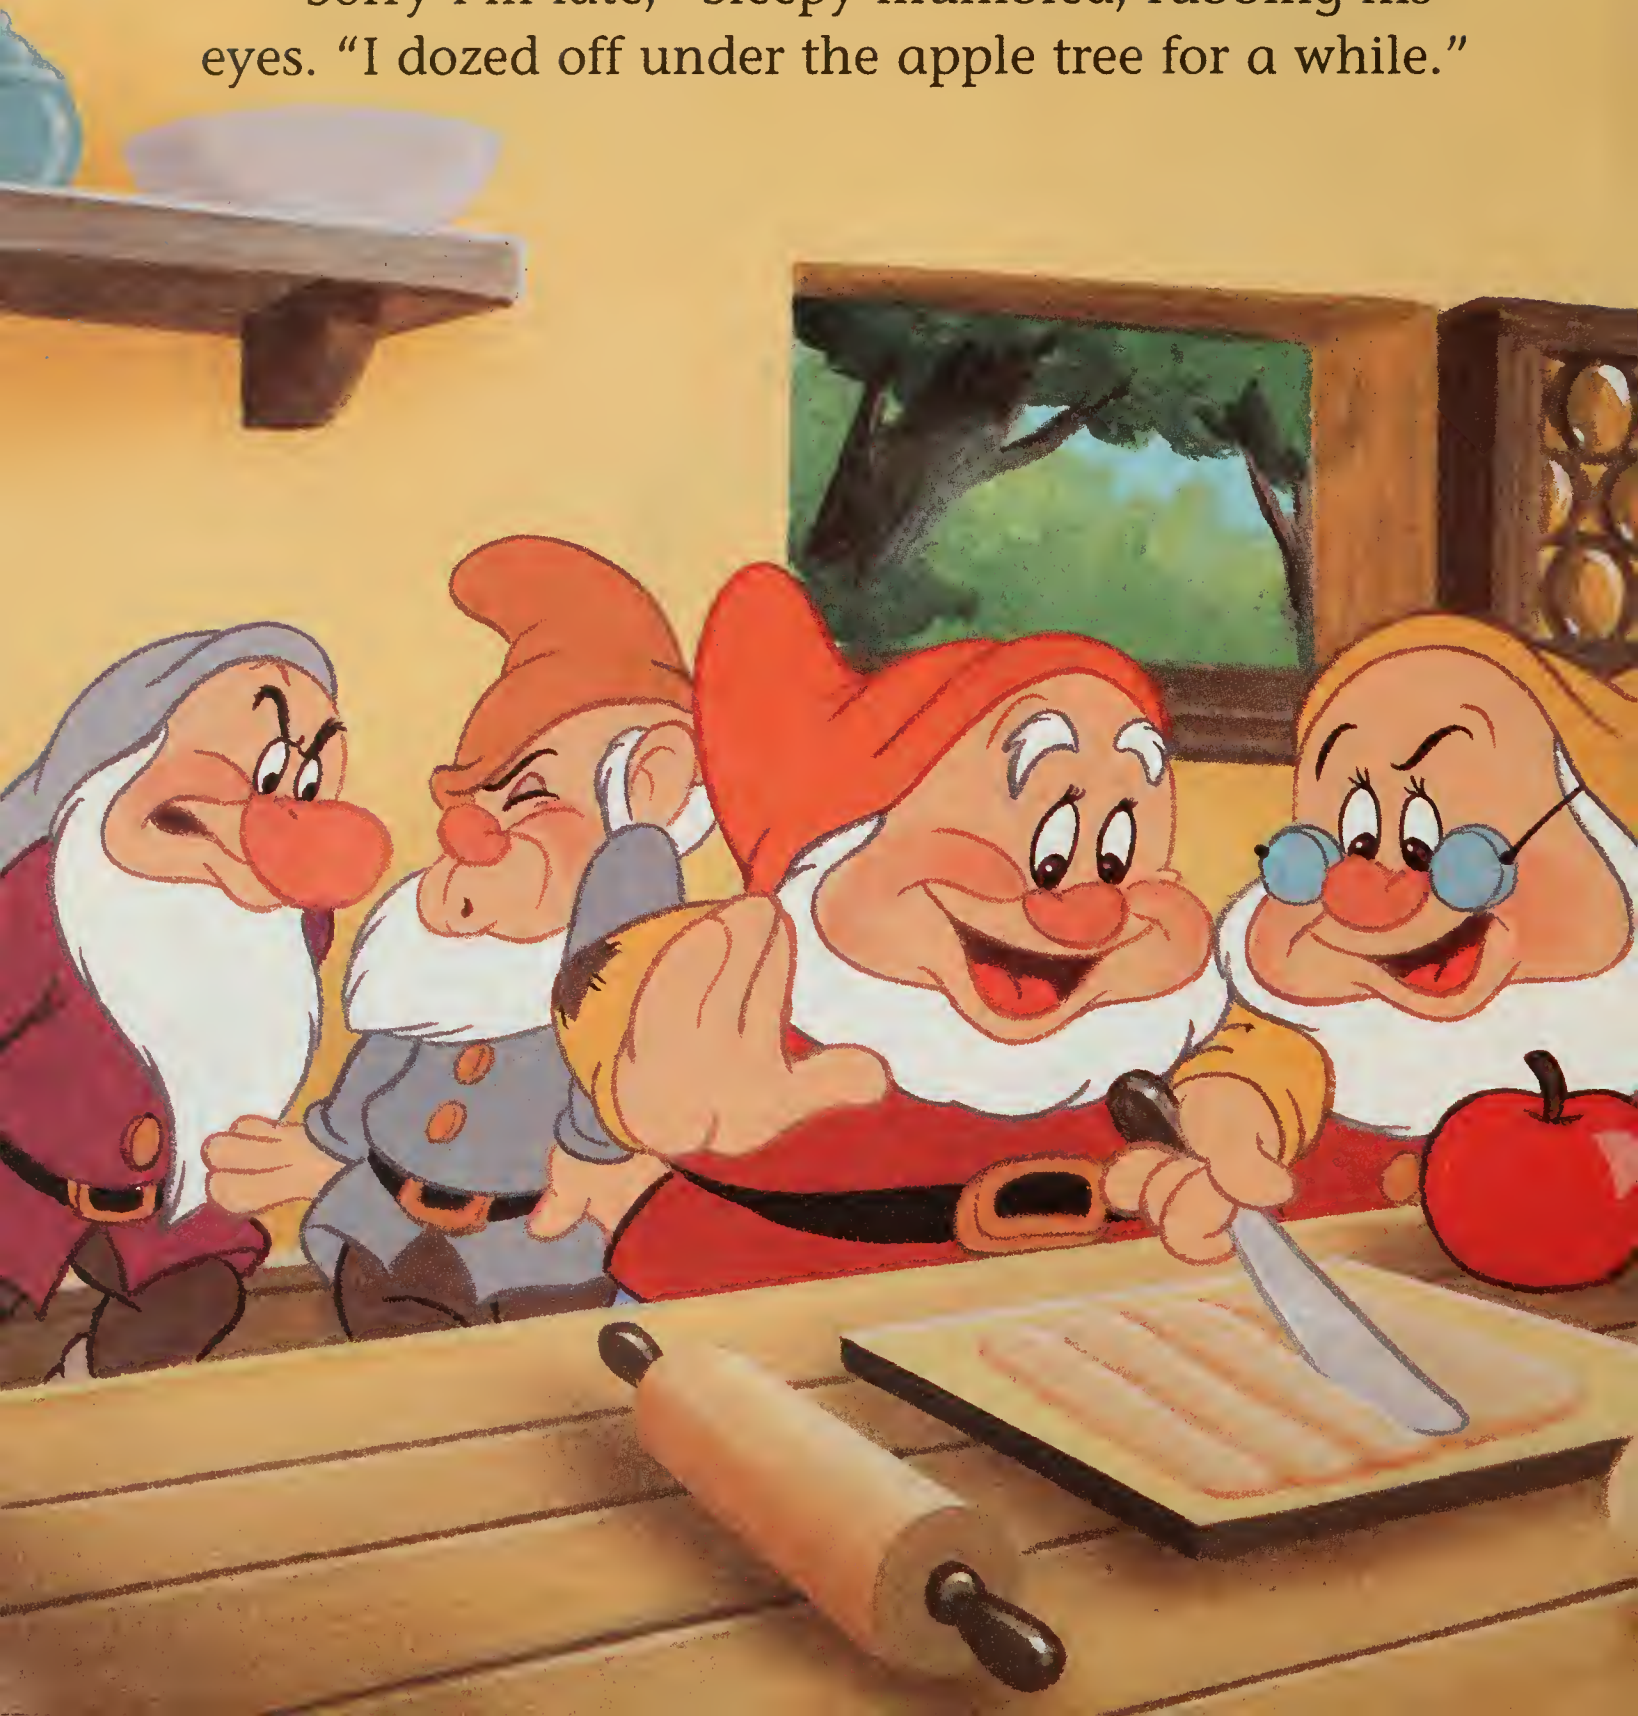


"Okay, okay," Grumpy said, stomping into the kitchen. "Here's your darn apple."

"Apple number five! Thank you so much, Grumpy," Snow White said, giving him a kiss.

"Aw, shucks," he muttered. "It was nothin'."

"Sorry I'm late," Sleepy mumbled, rubbing his eyes. "I dozed off under the apple tree for a while."



"That's quite all right," Snow White said. "The important thing is, you've brought us apple number six."

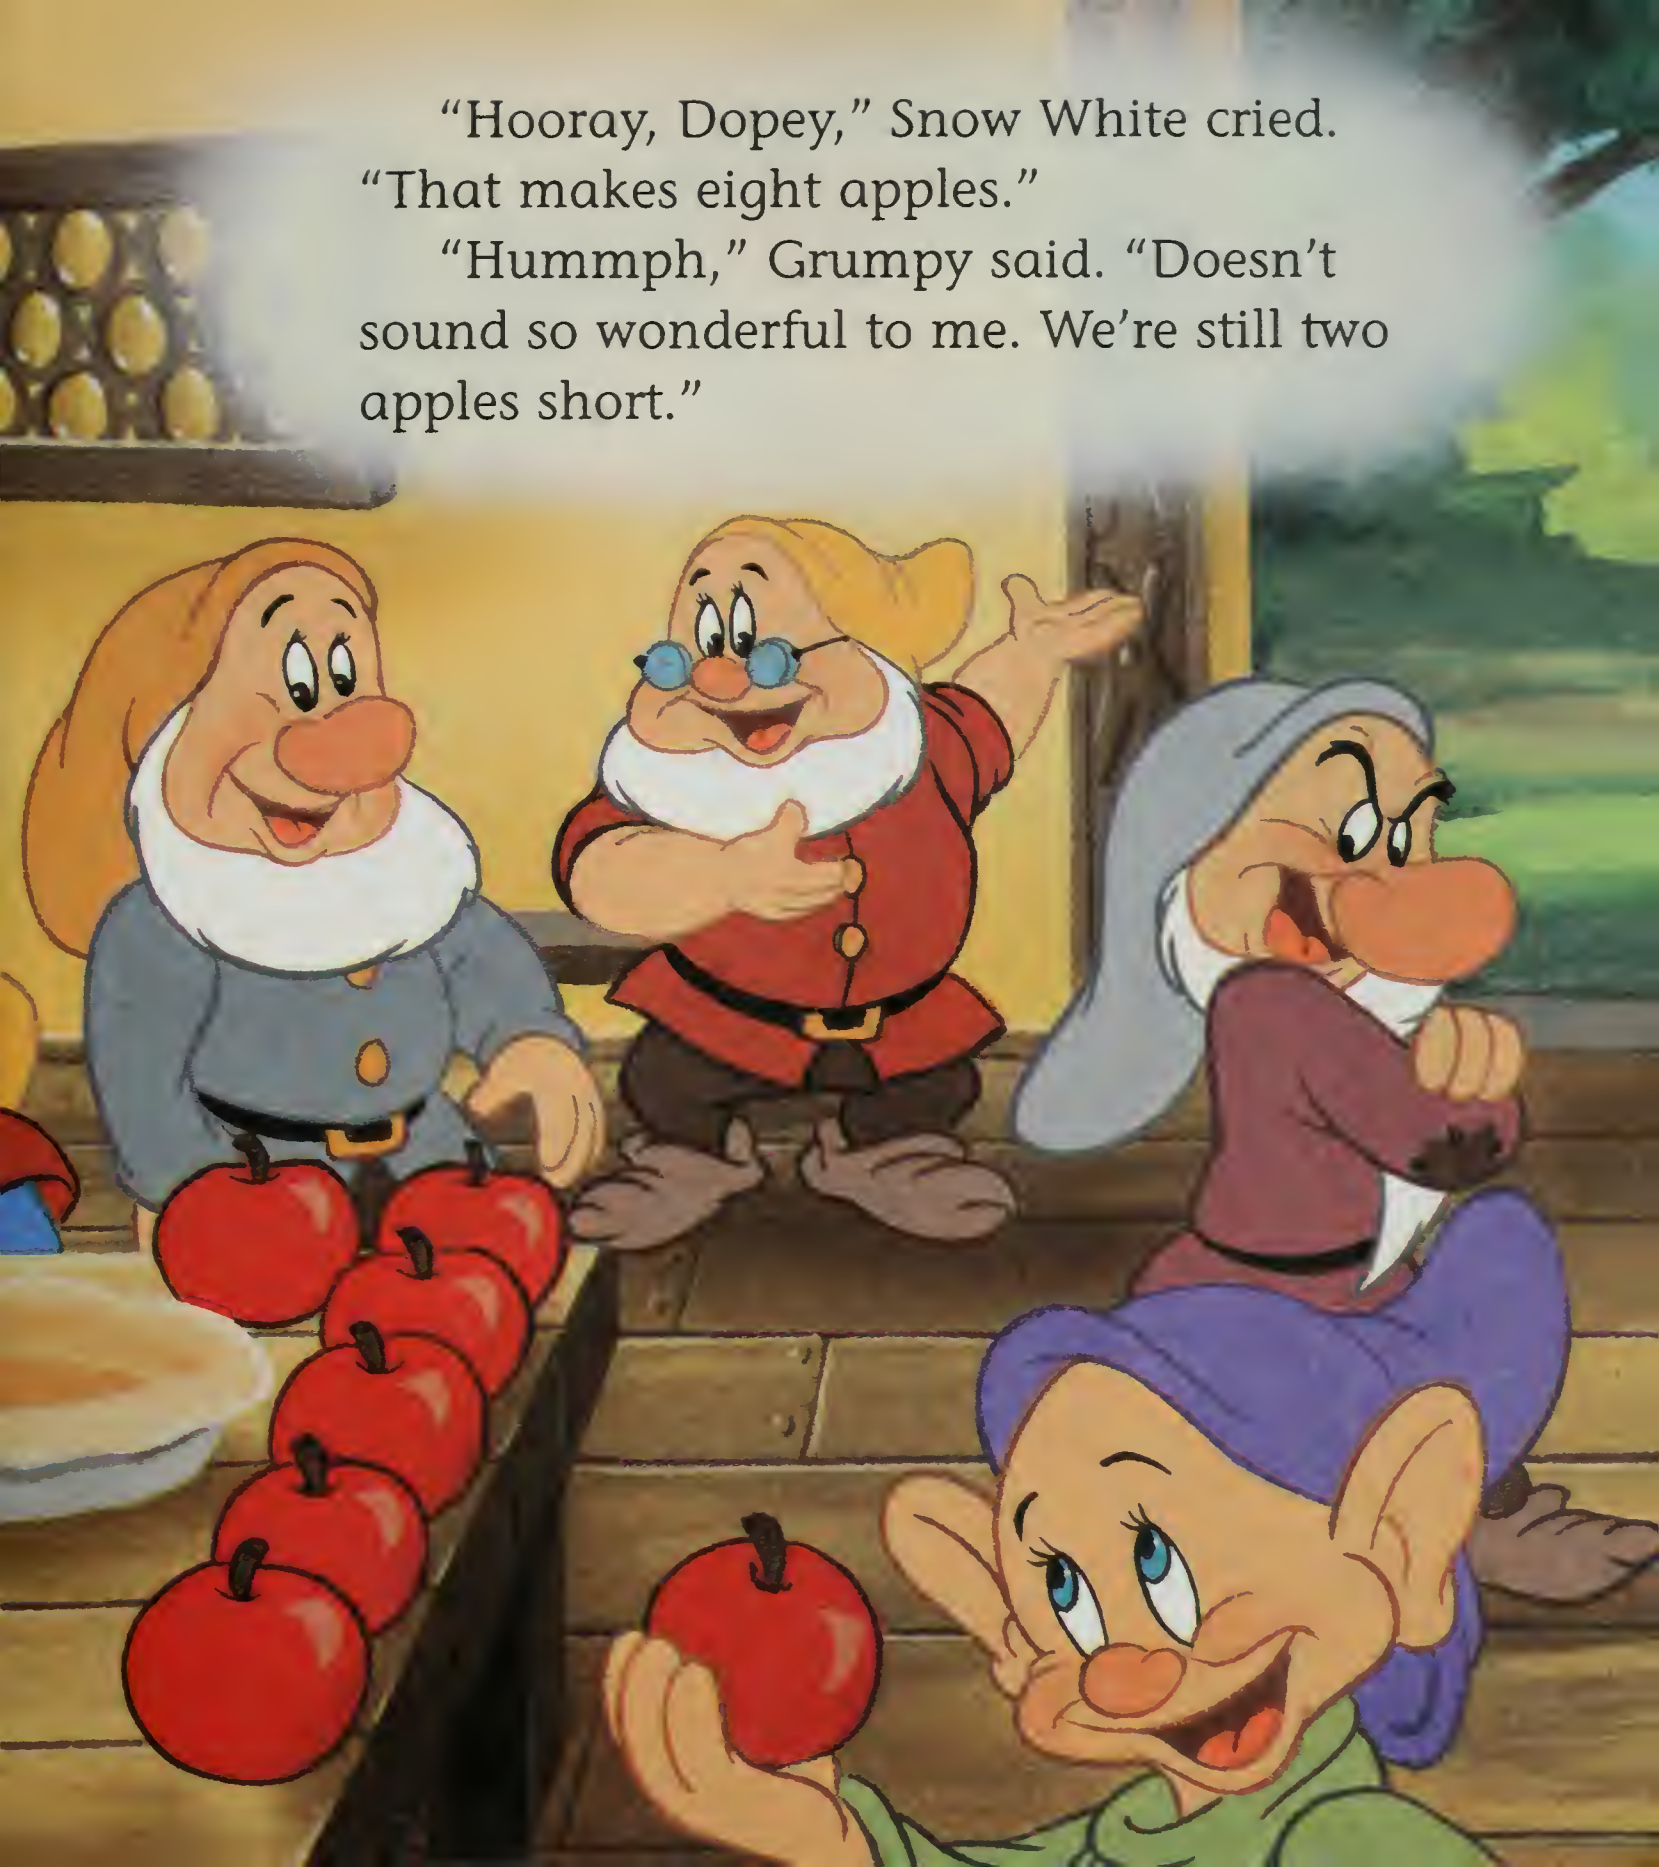
Dopey ran into the kitchen. He tripped over the doorsill, and his apple bounced out of his hand.

"Look out—frying fluit!" Doc cried. "Er, that is, flying fruit."

"Wonderful, everyone," Snow White said. "But we still only have seven apples. I need three more for the pie."

"Let's go, gang," Doc said. "Time to get more apples."

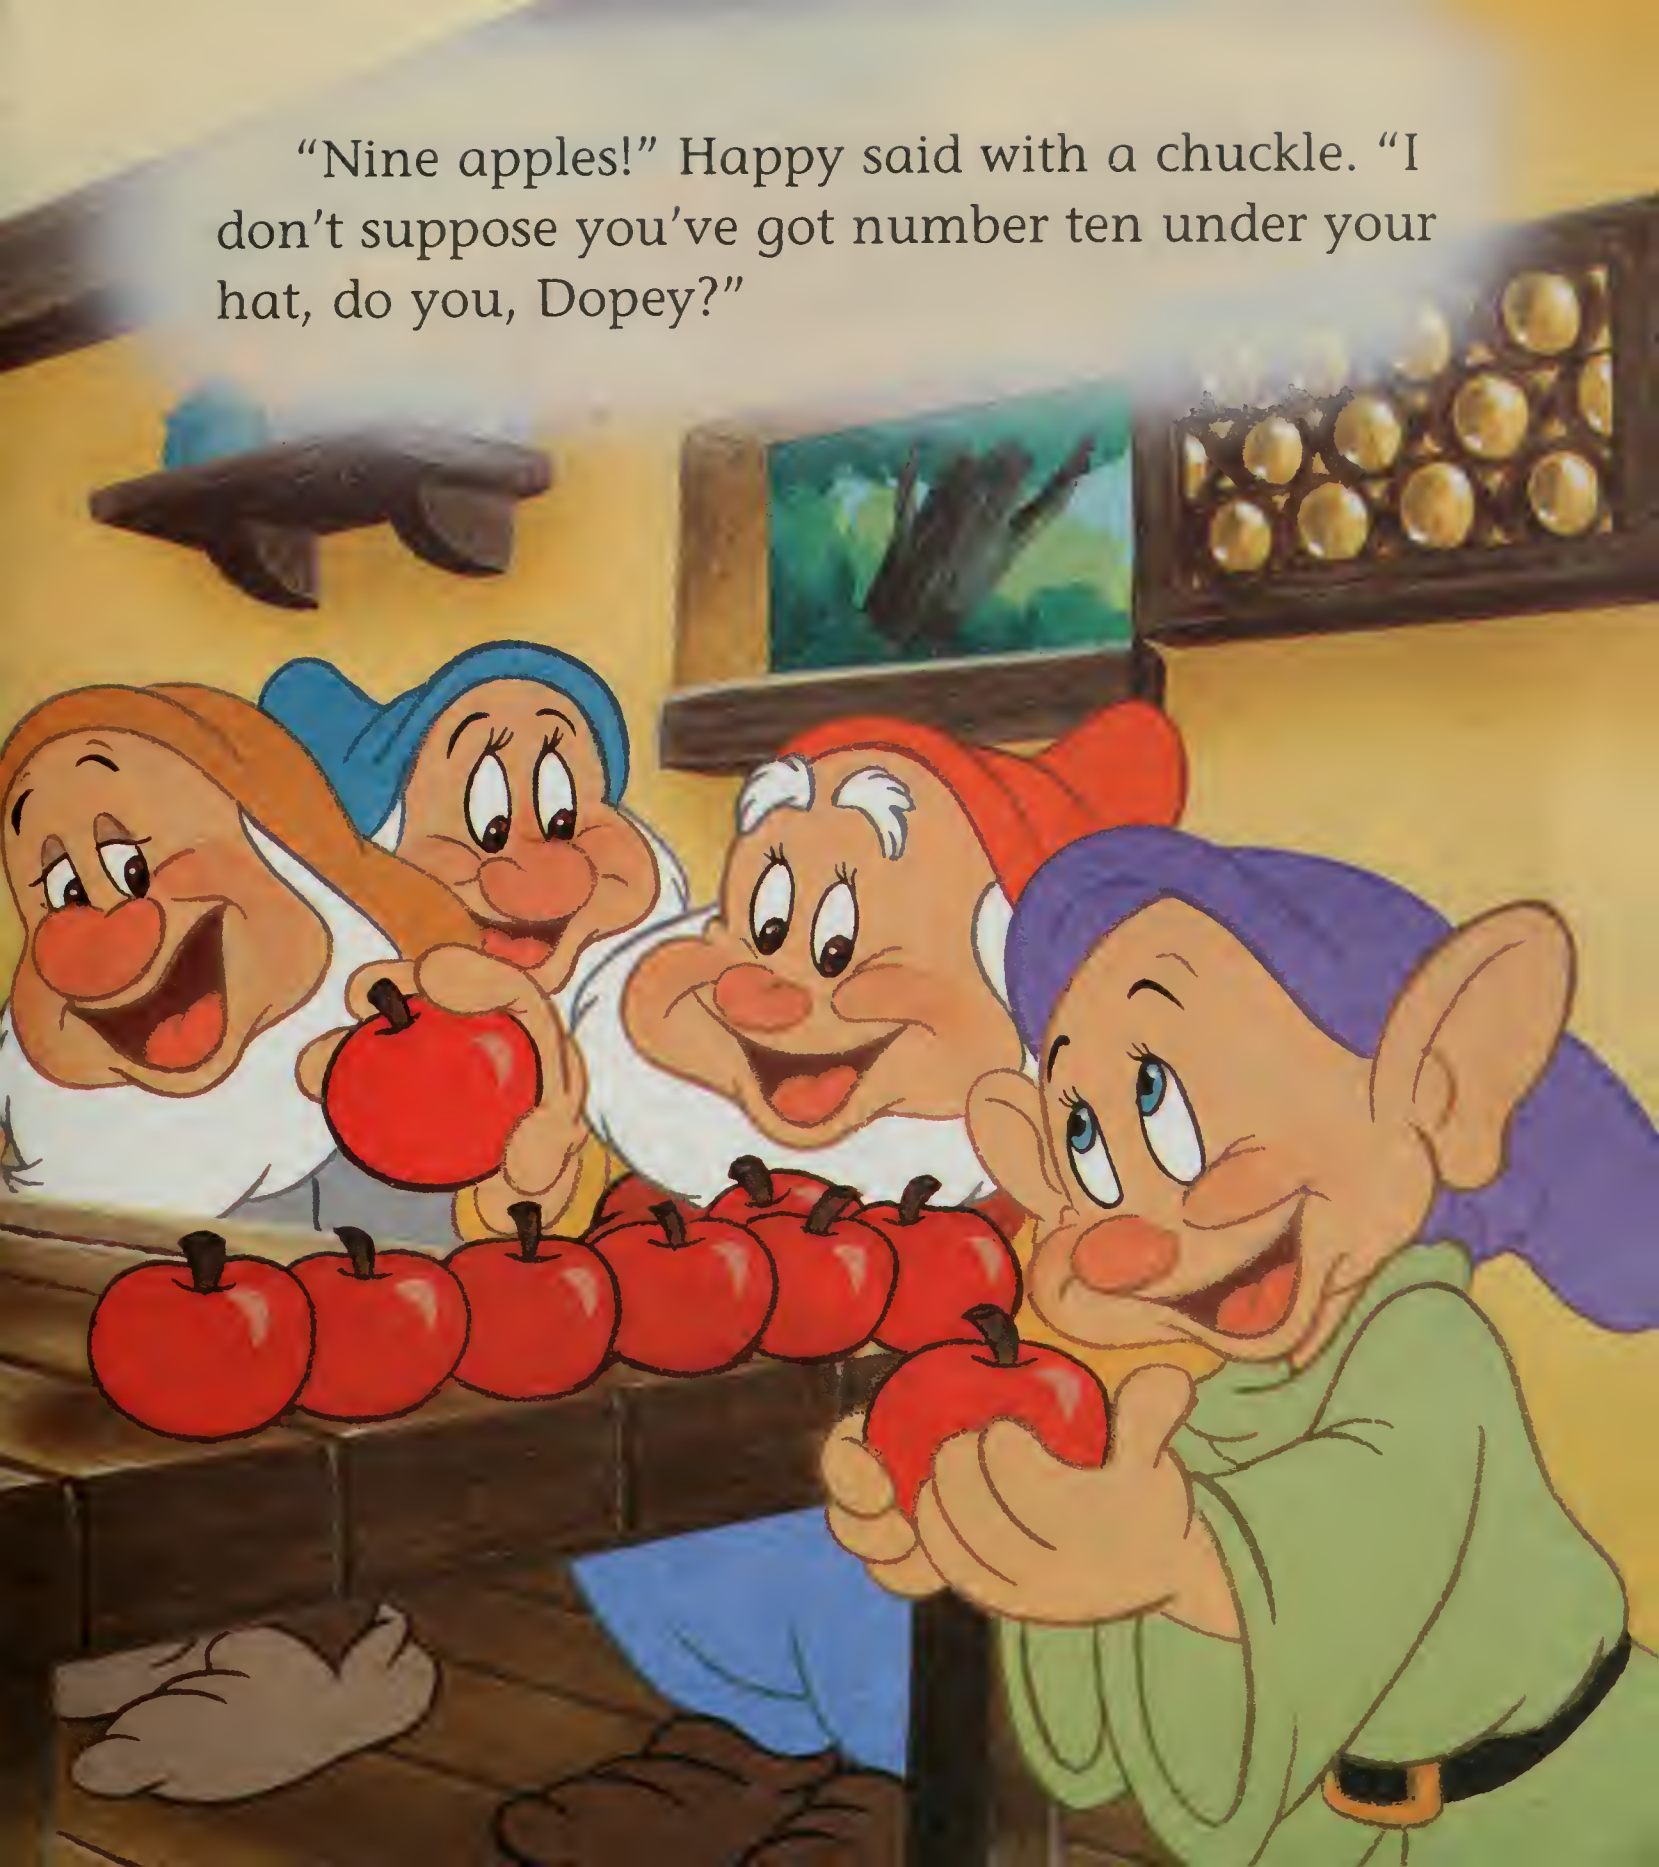
Dopey grinned and shook his head. With a flourish, he reached into his left pocket and pulled out an apple.



"Hooray, Dopey," Snow White cried. "That makes eight apples."

"Hummph," Grumpy said. "Doesn't sound so wonderful to me. We're still two apples short."

Dopey shook his head again. Then he dug into his right pocket and pulled out another apple.



"Nine apples!" Happy said with a chuckle. "I don't suppose you've got number ten under your hat, do you, Dopey?"

With a bigger grin than ever, Dopey whipped off his cap. Balanced on his head were not one—but two apples!

"Number ten," Doc said. "And—uh-oh—number eleven? That's too many apples!"

Dopey looked worried, but Snow White smiled. "Don't worry, Dopey," she said. "This won't go to waste." She bit into the crunchy fruit. "I just can't resist a good apple!"
